Dear Minister,

Workforce plan and pharmacy stakeholder engagement

We welcomed the Government's commitment to publish a long-term workforce plan, however we are concerned by a lack of engagement with pharmacy stakeholders about its development.

Pharmacy teams played a vital role during the COVID-19 pandemic and as their skills continue to evolve they will be central to improving patient access to healthcare. With more than 52,000 pharmacists, 21,000 pharmacy technicians and a range of support staff, the plan needs to be something which the whole of the health and care workforce can recognise.¹

While you noted in a recent Written Answer that the pharmacy workforce will be "considered in the development of the plan", we would welcome your reassurance that the plan will cover the entirety of the pharmacy workforce across the health service, including in community pharmacy.²

The Health and Social Care Committee's workforce report recognised there is an opportunity to better utilise the pharmacy workforce, and in doing so, to optimise workloads across primary care, reduce pressure on general practice and hospitals, and support integrated care systems.³

The Committee noted that this optimisation will not be possible without an integrated and funded workforce plan for pharmacy. It called for this plan to ensure adequate access to education supervision, training, and protected learning time, along with clear structures for professional development. It also noted that changes to pharmacy education mean that from 2026, all newly-qualified pharmacists will join the register as independent prescribers. This could herald a step-change in how we enhance patient access to care and the transition must be supported in the workforce plan. The pharmacy workforce plan should also outline how the existing workforce will be supported to become independent prescribers, and the Government's roadmap for utilising these skills through the commissioning of appropriate services.

With continued pressures on services, it is more important than ever to support the pharmacy workforce so that the staff needed to deliver patient care now and into the future can be recruited, trained and retained

We would welcome the opportunity to help shape and inform the workforce plan and would be pleased to discuss this further.

Yours sincerely,
